Jeff Bezos, the CEO of Amazon, in an interview he gave in 2010, famously remarked, “The number one app for the iPad when I checked a couple of days ago was called Angry Birds—a game where you throw birds at pigs and they blow up. The number one thing on the Kindle is Stieg Larsson. It’s a different audience. We’re designing for people who want to read.”

Those days are long gone, however. With the introduction of the Kindle Fire, Amazon has embraced the tablet market audience. Unlike its predecessors, the Kindle Fire is not just a reading device. It is a complete Android tablet, running on impressive hardware. You can listen to music, watch movie and play games on your Kindle.
