Leading with Honor: Leadership Lessons from the Hanoi Hilton - Group Training Leader Guide Lee Ellis
In Lee Ellis' award-winning book, Leading with HonorTM: Leadership Lessons from the Hanoi Hilton, he shares the life-transforming stories that he and his comrades experienced in the prison camps of Vietnam and leadership lessons that he learned. Now, use these powerful stories and leadership lessons as a group training program. The guiding principles that he has learned--the importance of knowing yourself, guarding your character, the over-communicating in a hostile culture, balancing the importance of the mission while nurturing the people around you, treasuring your trials and celebrating your successes, exploiting creativity to overcome obstacles, and more-have been invaluable in his personal career and the clients that he has served. Leading with Honor Group Training - - generates a buzz within a group or organization and Lee's POW stories resonate with groups. - creates more engagement than the typical leadership training event. - has a better retention rate allowing the principles to be used in day-to-day work. This training program is a holistic experience offering reading, reflection, discussion, application, and activity-the best elements for retention and use. "In Leading with Honor Lee draws from the POW experience, including some of his own personal stories, to illustrate the crucial impact of leadership on the success of any organization. His writings highlight lessons and principles that can be applied to every leadership situation." - Senator John McCain, United State Senate "Rarely can a leadership book-usually stark and cold in tone, written with business school savvy-be called moving, but former Air Force pilot and leadership consultant Ellis culls lessons from his experiences as a POW in the infamous Hoa Loa Prison (the "Hanoi Hilton") in North Vietnam and juxtaposes them with suggested strategies. Much more than a leadership text, he offers an inspiring story that will engage readers." - Publisher's Weekly
