Burt Mustin: The Reel Characters Series (Past Times Reel Characters Series Book 2) Jordan Young Burt Mustin got a bang out of being paid for something he did for nothing most of his life; he was 67 when his hobby became his profession. When he died early in 1977 he was one of the oldest working actors in Hollywood—almost 93 years young—and one of the busiest: in 25 years, he had logged more than 370 TV appearances and 76 feature-length films to his credit.

His characters glowed with the warmth of his own personality and crackled with his wit. The older he got the more in demand he was, and the more prominent his roles became. His wise-cracking delivery boys, slow-thinking night watchmen and worldly bachelors never failed to get a laugh.

He dispensed advice to Beaver Cleaver as Gus the fireman on “Leave It To Beaver.” He guarded the underground vault on “The Jack Benny Program.” He was falsely arrested by Barney Fife for disturbing the peace on “The Andy Griffith Show” but outsmarted Sergeant Friday on “Dragnet.” He counseled Archie Bunker on growing old on “All in the Family.”

As a bailiff in “Son of Flubber” or a retired outlaw in “Cat Ballou,” a doddering butler in “The Thrill of It All” or a drunk who disrobed in a bar on TV’s “Adam 12,” Mustin always made the most of his "little nuthin” parts. "I'm the best 'they-went-thataway' actor in town," he often said in self-mockery, with more than a tinge of amusement.

Toward the end of one of the most amazing careers in show biz, Burt became Johnny Carson's favorite closing act on “The Tonight Show,” offering jokes that were older than he was. He’s still vividly remembered today, with an active fan page on Facebook and an original song tribute on YouTube that has received more than 4,000 hits.

Entertainment historian Jordan R. Young, who knew Mustin well, chronicles his career and offers insight into his offscreen personality. This ebook includes many rare photographs of the prolific character actor, and the most complete list of his film and TV credits ever published.

The revised edition of “Reel Characters: Great Movie Character Actors” will be available prior to publication as a series of ebooks. This ebook is #2 in the series. The cast of characters includes Elisha Cook, Iris Adrian, Sam Jaffe, Beulah Bondi, Charles Lane, Fritz Feld, Anita Garvin, John Qualen, Burt Mustin, John Carradine, Rolfe Sedan and George Chandler.
